

The Sports Girl

Is it true women only want men that are very good looking? Are we just like men in this category? It is human nature that draws us to beauty or society's influence? Both may be true which brings up the topic of notoriety and the average looking individual. Isn't it remarkable when there are musicians, sports players who blend in with the rest of us, going unnoticed until they become famous then most everyone thinks they're gorgeous? There could be exceptions such as Keith Richards! I've been told by a number of women that before Johnny Damon or Pedro Martinez were well known they might not have given them a second look; now, since the notoriety they can see both are quite attractive. Beauty is in the eyes of the beholder. Johnny's sincerity for his teammates and his good looks enhances his persona. Speaking of Pedro, I just heard the Red Sox might lose him because they won't go for the third year. What a shame that would be!

How about the Eagles—they won Sunday night! {27 to 6} They did a great job! My take on the commercial with Terrell Owens and Nicollette less her towel? From a woman's prospective and being an adult, I liked the idea of the older woman with the younger guy. She's forty-one, he is thirty. Otherwise, better judgment by ABC would be nice since there may be young viewers. I agree that some kids see more on MTV and cable but parenting is challenging enough without adding Prime TV to the mix. Hopefully, parents will make good decisions when given the choice. I wonder what Walt Disney would think!

Isn't it refreshing when couples continue dating? I am speaking of all the kissing between Barry Zito and Alyssa Milano who were at the University of Southern California football game, which is his alma mater. Keep it going, keep it fresh.

Could Tom Brady already be married? I wonder-- would they honeymoon in Santa Barbara at San Ysidro, a wonderful ranch visited by other honeymooners-- Julia Roberts and Danny Moder? Do you think he would request "Beast of Burden" by the Rolling Stones at his wedding? I have heard he requests this very tune during the games when in a huddle. By the way, Tom was hot before he was famous!
